Art Unit: 2878

Applicant is reminded of the proper language and format for an abstract of the disclosure.

The abstract should be in narrative form and generally limited to a single paragraph on a separate sheet within the range of 50 to 150 words. It is important that the abstract not exceed 150 words in length since the space provided for the abstract on the computer tape used by the printer is limited. The form and legal phraseology often used in patent claims, such as "means" and "said," should be avoided. The abstract should describe the disclosure sufficiently to assist readers in deciding whether there is a need for consulting the full patent text for details.

The language should be clear and concise and should not repeat information given in the title. It should avoid using phrases which can be implied, such as, "The disclosure concerns," "The disclosure defined by this invention," "The disclosure describes," etc.

The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and, In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

Claims 2-19 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-11 of U.S. Patent No. 6,670,602. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because the claimed invention, claims 2-19, of the present application is a broader version of the claimed invention, claims 1-11, of the above identified U.S. Patent with similar intended scope. The synchronism with the movement of the stage recited in claim 2, of the present application has been inherently included in the performance of the control means of the claimed invention of the U.S. Patent mentioned above. The inclusion of a heater for the irradiator or irradiation source, in claim 5 of the present application would have been obvious as a mere matter of obvious design choice to one of ordinary skill in the art without altering the basic performance of the irradiation source. The inclusion of a Wien filter in the claims 11 and 18 of the present application would have been inherently included in the imaging electron optical system of the above mentioned U.S. Patent. Also, the further citation in claim 12 of the present application would have been inherently included in the known beam shaping means of the above mentioned U.S. Patent.

Claims 20-22 are allowable over the prior art of record because the prior art fails to disclose an inspection method for detecting a defect of a specimen, among other features, comprising the steps of specifying a defective place, finding a position of the defective place and moving the specimen stage for the intended purposes of the primary beam.

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

I) Kohama 6,677,587 discloses an inspection system having an electron beam source with a beam shaping device.
